

Details of how wind groups were established

The data was split into northerly and southerly wind subsets whereby values between 95° and 265° were considered 'southerly' and values between 0° and 85° and 275° and 360° considered 'northerly'. A 10° buffer between the northerly and southerly groups was used in recognition that wind direction is a fluctuating quantity which oscillates around its mean value.